Religious life and practice are a matter of choice at Adelphi University. As a private, nonsectarian University, Adelphi does not promulgate any particular religious belief or nonbelief. However, many members of the University community consider an active spiritual life to be an important component of a liberal arts education. The Interfaith Center offers students, faculty, University leaders and staff opportunities to worship, enjoy mutual fellowship, discuss spiritual values, seek spiritual guidance, learn about their religious traditions and discover those of others. Participation is voluntary and members of all faiths are welcome to all activities, programs and services.

The chaplains of the Interfaith Center not only foster an ecumenical and interfaith presence on campus, but also introduce interested members of the University community to houses of worship in the local area. On campus, locations include the Interfaith Chapel (Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 306) and the offices of the Catholic, Jewish, Muslim and Protestant chaplains (Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 302). Schedules of all activities, programs and services are posted in the Interfaith Center, located in Room 302 in the Ruth S. Harley University Center.

For more information, visit adelphi.edu/interfaith.

Catholic Chaplain

The Catholic chaplain is available to the University community for informal discussion, spiritual counseling, lectures, retreats and workshops. In addition, the Catholic chaplain offers a weekly Sunday Mass on campus at 7:00 p.m. in the chapel in the Ruth S. Harley University Center. The campus minister assists the Catholic chaplain in the coordination of on-campus programs and services.

Members of the University community are welcome to visit the office of the Catholic chaplain, located in the Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 302.

For current hours, availability and information about programming and services, contact the office of the Catholic chaplain at 516.877.3116 or catholic@adelphi.edu.

Jewish Chaplain

The Jewish chaplain is available to the University community for individual counseling and private Jewish study. The rabbi also introduces interested members of the University community to local synagogues for worship and fellowship.

The Jewish chaplain facilitates and plans annual programs and events, including Jewish holiday celebrations and observances.

Members of the University community are welcome to visit the office of the Jewish chaplain, which is located in the Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 302. For current hours, availability, information, programming and services, contact the office of the Jewish chaplain at 516.877.3115 or auinterfaith@adelphi.edu.

Muslim Chaplain

The Muslim chaplain is available for informal discussion, consultation and sharing of information related to Ramadan, Eid, etc., and local Islamic centers. The chaplain’s office also provides on-campus programs and services relating to the Muslim faith.

Every Friday at 1:15 p.m. during the semester, the Muslim chaplain offers khutbah services in the Interfaith Chapel.

Members of the University community are welcome to visit the office of the Muslim chaplain, located in the Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 302, or in the chaplain’s academic office in Blodgett Hall, Room 200B.

For current hours, availability, information, programming and services, contact the office of the Muslim chaplain at 516.877.4798 or auinterfaith@adelphi.edu.

Protestant Chaplain

The Protestant chaplain is available to the University community for consultation and counseling. Study programs on the Bible, the Christian vocation and other topics are offered to interested members of the University community.

Regular, special holy day and ecumenical services and interfaith workshops are scheduled throughout the academic year. Followers of all faiths are welcome at these liturgies.

Members of the University community are welcome to visit the office of the Protestant chaplain, located in the Ruth S. Harley University Center, Room 302. For current hours, availability, information, programming and services, contact the office of the Protestant chaplain at 516.877.3114 or auinterfaith@adelphi.edu.
