Contest Submission Advice

We strongly prefer content that focuses on your school or community rather than national events already covered by the national media. Proximity is a major element of news, and you can provide unique value by covering stories from your local perspective. For example, reporting on the high school sports teams, the school play, local events like a battle of the bands, or conflicts involving your school board is highly encouraged. These are stories only you can tell, as you are often the only source of such coverage. While national events such as the war in Ukraine, Taylor Swift concerts, or the New York Giants are newsworthy, they are typically covered extensively and promptly by national media. If you choose to submit a story about a national event, ensure it has a local school tie, such as involving an alum or student from your school.
